whole year was possible, but it was apparent that should the present conditions continue the deficit at the end of the year would be $30,000,000. The report was ordered printed.

The discussion of the last two days was then taken up again, and Mr. Stewart addressed the Senate. He said that he had little or nothing to say as to the correction of the journal or the amendment of the rules. His speech was a mere formality, and he spoke for two hours and then left the Senate chamber.

cannot, by our rules, tie ourselves up so that the majority has not the power to amend the rules.

Mr. Butler: But we have tied ourselves up by a code of rules, to which the Senate subscribed when the Senator took the oath of office. Now I understand him to say that the majority is not bound by that code of rules, except so far as it meets his approval.

Mr. Hill: We have tied our hands, I propose to untie them, so that we can change the rules.

Mr. Butler: How?

Mr. Hill: By offering at the proper time and place an amendment to the rules, and then proceeding, as may be regulated by the majority, to vote upon it. There is nothing in the Constitution that prevents the Senate from changing the rules, if the majority of the Senate desires to change the rules. I have thus far proceeded under the strict letter of the rules, but what position the majority shall take on this question will depend very much on the attitude of the minority. I hope that before this debate is through, majority will be found by Mr. Palmer ready to accept the majority's right to amend the rules, whereby the Senate can carry out the will of the majority.
